Hi John,

Today, The Rest is Politics is tackling the story too often kept in the dark – and millions of listeners are tuning in to hear IJM lead the conversation.

The UK is one of the top three global consumers of livestreamed child sexual abuse. That's why The Rest is Politics invited IJM CEO Gary Haugen and IJM UK's Chief Public Engagement Officer Molly Hodson to speak about the reality of online exploitation of children, how UK demand drives it, and the technological advancements that can stop it.

The UK National Crime Agency, Europol, and Interpol have all warned that livestreamed abuse is a fast-growing, serious threat. 1 in every 100 children in the Philippines is being trafficked to produce new child sexual exploitation material*, including livestreamed content.

"This is a massive global threat to children all around the world. And we're not just talking the Philippines; we're talking in the UK." - Molly Hodson, IJM UK

In the latest episode of The Rest is Politics (IJM feature begins at 24:40), you'll hear how children can be brought to safety and how to stop the abuse before it starts.

Together, we are calling for urgent action to stop livestreamed child sexual abuse.

Until all are free,

Molly Hodson

Chief Public Engagement Officer, IJM UK

P.S. Invite your MP to our parliamentary drop-in. IJM UK is holding an event in Parliament for MPs to understand the rise of livestreamed child sexual abuse – and the technology that can stop the abuse before starts. Your voice is important: MPs are far more likely to attend when they hear from their constituents. Take two minutes to invite your MP now.
